ST TERESA’S GREEN TEAM

Although compostable and biodegradable are terms that are often used interchangeably, they do not mean the same thing. So what’s the difference? Compostable is a legally defined word. Items labeled as “compostable” will break down and turn into soil at commercial composting facilities within a specified number of days. Help keep the compost waste stream clean by only adding compostable containers and utensils if they are labeled as “compostable” or “plant based” should go into the trash). Don’t forget that food scraps, dirty paper, yard trimmings, and other organic material can also go in the green bin!

SPRING CLEANING = GENEROUS GIFT

At Christmas, you are generous with new gifts for individual children. This spring, as you sort through what your children have outgrown, you can give of your abundance to The Lantern for all their children. They are looking for gently used children’s clothes, toys, books; from infant through teens. The Circle of Light will collect items over the next 3 weeks and deliver “Easter Baskets” of goodies on April 17 to The Lantern. If you wish to donate, please contact a member of the Circle of Light after Mass or via email (see bulletin board for list).

THE LIGHT IS ON FOR YOU

This Lent, the Archdiocese will join an initiative to encourage greater participation in the Sacrament of Reconciliation, especially among those who have not received this sacrament recently. In accordance, all parishes in the three counties of the Archdiocese will be open for confessions on the Tuesdays of Lent from 6:00 – 8:00 pm. Join us at the same time for Eucharistic Adoration.

Next week, we will take up the Catholic Home Missions Appeal. Right now, over 40% of dioceses in the United States are considered mission territory because they are unable to fund essential pastoral work in their communities. Your support of this appeal eases the struggle of these dioceses. Find more information at: www.usccb.org/home-missions

THE WOMAN ACCUSED OF ADULTERY

As we celebrate Mass together we include in our prayers:

April 6 & 7
10:00 o’clock Mass on the Third, Fourth, and Fifth Sundays of Lent. At the other Sunday Masses we are using the “C” Cycle, and this Sunday’s Gospel is from John Chapter 8, the Woman Accused of Adultery.

The “C” Cycle Gospels of Lent focus on reconciliation and forgiveness, and today’s Gospel is, perhaps, the most powerful and dramatic example of this theme. As Jesus is teaching in the temple precincts, the scribes and Pharisees lead a woman forward who had been caught in adultery. The Law of Moses demanded she be stoned to death, and the religious leaders ask Jesus what should be done. Jesus challenges the crowd (“Let the one among you who is without sin cast the first stone . . .”), and the crowd dissipates, leaving only Jesus and the woman. “There is no one here to condemn you,” says Jesus, “neither do I condemn you. Go and avoid this sin.”

Certainly, today’s homily will focus on themes of compassion and forgiveness. But in this week’s column, I’d like to take a different approach: I’d like to examine some of the underlying religious, cultural, and political dimensions which frame the context of this week’s gospel.

Our starting point for examining today’s text is to recognize that this story – as described in today’s Gospel – probably never happened. There are two major reasons why scholars and historians make this claim.

Scholars tell us that although there is evidence that this story “circulated” in the early Christian communities, the fact is that there is no mention of a woman caught in adultery anywhere in the Synoptic Gospels. This story is found only in John, and it does not appear in several of the early manuscripts of the Gospel. This raises the question as to whether the story was part of John’s original Gospel, and the “sketchiness” surrounding the story raises questions about whether the incident actually took place.

But there is a more compelling reason as to why this story probably never happened. When Israel was under Roman rule, we have no evidence, either from Roman or Jewish sources, that anyone was ever executed under Jewish Law. The most compelling fact supporting this position is actually found in the Gospels themselves, and it concerns the execution of Jesus. After he is found guilty by the Sanhedrin, the Jewish authorities bring Jesus to Pilate, who says, “Take him yourselves, and judge him according to your law.” The Jews answer, “We do not have the right to execute anyone” (John 18:31). The Jewish authorities would have liked to execute Jesus for blasphemy, but Roman occupation prohibited them from doing so. For this reason, the Jewish authorities turned Jesus over to Pilate for trial and execution. Had Jesus been executed under Jewish law, he would have been stoned to death for blasphemy; instead, under Roman law, he was crucified for the crime of treason.

In the New Testament there is one instance when a Jewish mob did take the law into its own hands: the martyrdom of Stephen (Acts 6:8-60). This occurred several years after the death of Jesus at a time when insurrection and revolution against Rome became increasingly more bold. Such rebellious disregard for Roman authority triggered a Roman response: in 70 AD, both Jerusalem and the Temple were destroyed, and any remaining Jewish resistance was wiped out at Masada (73-74 AD). The Romans suppressed and destroyed the Jewish state, and it was not restored until 1948.

The bottom line is that it makes no difference whether the incident described in today’s Gospel ever happened. That’s because, theologically, the story of the woman caught in adultery not only crystallizes the conflict between Jesus and the Jewish authorities, but also demonstrates the centrality of Jesus’ message regarding reconciliation and forgiveness. The validity of the story rests, not in its historical accuracy, but in its theological truth, and as such it is one of the most profound examples of compassion and forgiveness found in the New Testament.
